Documenting Care
Abstract

Objective The objective of this study was to assess the association between the quality of basic note keeping and partogram documentation with progression of shift and workload on labour ward. Design This was a prospective observational study. Setting The setting of this study was a labour ward of a teaching district hospital in an inner city London hospital. Methods Intrapartum notes and partograms of 61 consecutive labouring women were assessed for quality of midwifery documentation at the beginning, middle and end of a 12-h shift. Measurements The measurements of this study were a basic note-keeping composite score based on validated criteria by the Nursing and Midwifery Record Keeping Guidance 2010 and a partogram completion score based on the National Institute for Clinical Excellence (NICE) Guidelines for Intrapartum Care 2007. Findings The basic note keeping deteriorated between the middle and the end of the 12-h shift, but it appeared unaffected by workload, with no statistically significant difference between day and night shifts. Partogram documentation was poorer in the middle compared to the beginning of the shift, and there was no statistical difference between day and night shifts. Partogram completion appeared to be influenced by women: midwife ratio as well as progression through a shift. Key conclusions The basic note keeping and partogram documentation were best at the beginning of the shift, and fatigue may play a role in poorer documentation towards the middle and the end of the shifts. Implication for practice Appropriately scheduled breaks especially during the final third of the shifts may help improve the quality of documentation.

As citizens, we must all take responsibility for our own health to some extent, and recent developments in medical informatics have provided some valuable new ways to help us do that. This book presents the proceedings of the 2020 Special Topic Conference of the European Federation for Medical Informatics (EFMI STC 2020), held for the first time as a virtual conference on 26 & 27 November 2020, due to restrictions associated with the COVID-19 pandemic. Entitled Integrated citizen centered digital health and social care – Citizens as data producers and service co-creators, this conference focused on the citizen-centered aspects of health informatics. This topic provided the opportunity for contributors to present innovative solutions to allow citizens to take greater responsibility for their health with the help of information and communication technology, and the 52 presented papers published here cover a wide range of areas under the broad, invited subject headings of: tools and technologies to support citizen-centered digital services; capacity building to enhance the development and use of digital services; confidentiality, data integrity and data protection to guarantee trustworthy services; citizen safety in digital services; effectiveness and impact of citizen-digital and integrated health and social services; evaluation approaches and methods for digital services; usability, usefulness and user acceptance of digital services; and guidelines for the successful implementation of digital services for citizens. Offering a current overview of research and applications, the book will be of interest to all those health professionals working to increase citizen use of digital healthcare.

Documenting Death is a gripping ethnographic account of the deaths of pregnant women in a hospital in a low-resource setting in Tanzania. Through an exploration of everyday ethics and care practices on a local maternity ward, anthropologist Adrienne E. Strong untangles the reasons Tanzania has achieved so little sustainable success in reducing maternal mortality rates, despite global development support. Growing administrative pressures to document good care serve to preclude good care in practice while placing frontline healthcare workers in moral and ethical peril. Maternal health emergencies expose the precarity of hospital social relations and accountability systems, which, together, continue to lead to the deaths of pregnant women.
